

The Push to Prescribe

Women and Canadian Drug Policy

Subjects

Sociology of Health
Sociology
Sociology
Nursing
Mental Health and Addictions
Gender
Health and Wellness
Health Studies
Gender, Sexuality, and Women's Studies
Health Studies

297 pages

6 x 9 inches

July 2009

ISBN: 9780889614789

Available at:

To request a review copy:
info@canadianscholars.ca
416-929-2774

In recent years, heated debate has surrounded the pharmaceutical industry and how it has gained unprecedented control over the evaluation, regulation, and promotion of its own products. As a result, drugs are produced, regulated, marketed, and used in ways that infiltrate many aspects of everyday life. The nature and extent of this infiltration, and how this has special meaning for women, are at the core of The Push to Prescribe.

This is an essential resource for a variety of courses in Health Sciences, Medicine, Nursing, Pharmacology, Public Policy, Public Health, Health Policy, Women's Studies, Women's Health, as well as many Social Science courses in areas like Sociology and Political Science. It will also be of interest to a general audience, health professional organizations, government health associations, and consumer and women's groups.

Author Information

Anne Rochon Ford

Anne Rochon Ford is the Coordinator of Women and Health Protection, a national working group mandated to provide research-based policy advice on the safety of prescription medication. Over the last decade, WHP has commissioned research on a range of topics within the field of women and pharmaceuticals, resulting in the body of work represented in this book.

Diane Saibil

Diane Saibil is a freelance writer and editor.

Reviews

"A compelling book about one of the major societal problems of this decade: the over-consumption of prescription drugs. Much of the information is original and certainly not available elsewhere. Books such as this are much needed to educate and engage people in finding solutions. Extremely valuable."

James M. Wright, Departments of Anesthesiology, Pharmacology, Therapeutics, and Medicine, University of British Columbia

"Canada needs this book. If you're going to read any book about women and pharmaceuticals this year, this is the one."

Alan Cassels, Director, Drug Policy Futures, University of Victoria

"This book is invaluable in pulling together research findings from different literatures and policy documents. I would strongly recommend it."

Patricia Kaufert, Community Health Sciences, University of Manitoba

"This book is invaluable in pulling together research findings from different literatures and policy documents. I would strongly recommend it."

Patricia Kaufert, Community Health Sciences, University of Manitoba

"This is a book that I would use to help students think critically about women's health needs. The authors capture the complexity surrounding women and pharmaceuticals and make a cogent argument for why Canadians need to think carefully about what we thought we already knew. They suggest that we need to reconsider previous assumptions about what is best for women, what is best for public health policy, and who is best suited to make these determinations. I will buy a copy for myself, my mother, and my daughter."

Peggy J. Kleinplatz, Faculty of Medicine, University of Ottawa

"This is a book that I would use to help students think critically about women's health needs. The authors capture the complexity surrounding women and pharmaceuticals and make a cogent argument for why Canadians need to think carefully about what we thought we already knew. They suggest that we need to reconsider previous assumptions about what is best for women, what is best for public health policy, and who is best suited to make these determinations. I will buy a copy for myself, my mother, and my daughter."— Peggy J. Kleinplatz, Faculty of Medicine, University of Ottawa

Table of Contents

Foreword - Nancy Olivieri_
Preface

Chapter 1: Introduction - The Steering Committee of Women and Health Promotion_

Part I: The Push to Prescribe: Who Defines What Drugs We Need and How Do They Do It?*

Chapter 2: "Ask Your Doctor": Women and Direct-to-Consumer Advertising - Barbara Mintzes_

Chapter 3: Preventing Disease: Are Pills the Answer? - Sharon Batt and Abby Lippman_

Chapter 4: Who Pays the Piper? Industry Funding of Patients' Groups - Sharon Batt_

Part II: The Canadian Drug Regulatory Process

Chapter 5: Trials on Trial: Women and the Testing of Drugs - Abby Lippman_

Chapter 8: Questioning Modernization: Legislative Change at Health Canada - _Anne Rochon Ford_

Chapter 9: Full Circle: Drugs, the Environment, and Our Health - _Sharon Batt_

Chapter 10: Finding a way Forward - _The Steering Committee of Women and Health Protection_

Further Reading
Related Websites
References
Copyright Acknowledgements
Index

Related Books

An Introduction to Health Policy
Toba Bryant
Responding to the Oppression of Addiction, 2nd Edition
Rick Csiernik, William S. Rowe
Women and HIV Prevention in Canada
Jacqueline Gahagan
The Drug Paradox
Tara Bruno, Rick Csiernik